

Heather L. Bradley

Helping Executives Change The Way They Experience Work

Heather L. Bradley works with frustrated executives who desperately want to change the way they experience work. Through The Career Defibrillator™ and private coaching, executives learn to align their work with what is most important to them, reduce their frustration, and use their customized action plan to give their career a jolt. Heather is fiercely committed to helping executives who want to make the necessary adjustments to be inspired by their work. Some clients choose to stay where they are and make changes while some continue the work they love in different organizations. Others choose to reinvent their career entirely, as Heather did. Despite becoming a Fortune 500 Officer and Vice President at the age of 40, Heather was herself a frustrated executive. She left behind a frustrating work experience and is acutely aware you do not have to settle for a work experience that drains you physically, emotionally and spiritually. Heather believes an inspiring work path is available to anyone – even if you cannot see it right now. Clients praise Heather for their accelerated results using her 3-step system and for modeling a life lived with the purpose of making the impossible, possible. How frustrated are you? Download your complimentary Frustration Barometer at www.FrustratedExecutives.com to establish your baseline reading and start reducing your workplace frustration now.

